Summary

This course will allow you to gain a recognised qualification and develop design/craft skills in stained or fused glass techniques. The course will cover the following areas:

- Make a piece of stained or fused glass.
- Research design ideas, looking at the work of others, and develop an original design idea inspired by your research.
- Plan the process of making and stick to your schedule.
- Create samples to support your technical experiments and make notes of your results.
- Identify your strengths and weaknesses throughout the design and making processes and reflect on how you can develop your work in the future.
- Follow good health and safety throughout.
- Complete your work and give evaluation on the overall piece.

Ruth Adams taught fired stained-glass painting at Central Saint Martins, where she previously completed her postgraduate studies in glass with distinction. She taught stained glass for ten years at the City Literary Institute in Central London. Ruth relocated to Stroud, where she works as a practicing artist, and she set up the glass department within the Arts School. She is a respected educator, with an enormous amount of experience and enthusiasm to help you engage with this fantastic subject. Fee includes a sketchbook and the finest materials for test samples and a panel up to A3 size. For larger work, you will need to buy some additional materials from a supplier or the tutor. If you are in receipt of benefits, a waiver may apply.
